DO YOU TRUST YOUR SOURCES?

The scholarly reputation of thousands of academics and institutions are at risk because of questionable publication practices.

Our services allow you to check your references, providing insight into potential questionable citations.

Our Solution

Fidelior™ is a digital service that aims to enhance trust in scholarly publishing by providing a solution that tackles the growing problem of predatory journals and questionable publishing.

Fidelior™ flags questionable and untrustworthy journals to help users conduct their own due diligence. The service also reports on reputable titles included in submitted references.

The Metadatabase Service

Fidelior™ has developed a unique service that can check references across multiple recognised journal sources and flag those that are considered questionable or untrustworthy.

Fidelior™'s propriety Metadatabase enables a user to search over 274,000 records and 91,000+ journal titles matched to more than 37 journal sources.

The service allows you to quickly scan a manuscript, publication or reference list and receive a report which flags questionable journal titles.

The report helps authors, reviewers and editors to make informed decisions, based on their own due diligence assessment, regarding the quality of the references they use.

Search Journal Titles

The Journal Search Tool provides basic functionality to search and browse the Fidelior™ Metadatabase. It allows a user to search according to a Journal Title or ISSN number.

Upload manuscripts

The Citation Report Tool automates the current manual process of checking references across multiple recognised journal sources and flag those that are potentially questionable.
